

"Mildred Brown, WHERE did you get that peachy sweater? It's the darlings-est thing I ever saw!" was the paean of praise sung by Maude Jones when she saw her chum's new pullover sweater.

"At Wolfers, and Oh! Maude, you just ought to SEE them—they have just opened a new shipment, and they have the most fascinating sweaters in town."

"Of course, there are a lot of pullover sweaters; but these are the PAN-AMERICAN make, and they have so many new distinctive touches! And the loveliest colors—pink, blue, the new reds, and tan shades. And did you notice the new bell sleeve they have? And really, they are AWFULLY reasonable."

"Let us drop in now and look at them. We have time before going to school."

DISTINCTIVENESS is a characteristic of our shop.

PRESIDENT CALLS ON EMMELINE WELLS AT UTAH HOTEL

SALT LAKE, Sept. 24.—Only one person in Salt Lake was favored with an official call by President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. This individual was Mrs. Emmeline B. Wells, the aged president of the Relief societies of the L. D. S. church, and one of the founders of woman suffrage in Utah. Mrs. Wells, who has been ill for several weeks in her room at the Hotel Utah, greatly desired to see the president. At first it was thought she might be taken in a wheel chair to see him pass to his rooms, as she was located on the same floor as the president's suite. But she was too weak for that, so President and Mrs. Wilson made a ten-minute call on Mrs. Wells.

President Wilson sat by Mrs. Wells' bedside, and, in shaking hands with her, said he wanted to thank her for what she did as president of the Relief societies in helping with her associates in the storing of wheat and then turning it over to the government in time of need. Mrs. Wells, in answer, related some of her experiences in early days. She told the president how, when she first came to Great Salt Lake valley, her first home was a wagon box, located on the same piece of land on which is now her home.

President Wilson asked Mrs. Wells to write him a letter, which she promised to do. Mr. Wilson commented on the beauties of Utah and told Mrs. Wells he thought Salt Lake City, with its wide streets, was a beautiful place. Mrs. Wilson also cordially greeted and shook hands with Mrs. Wells. Officers in the room at the time of the president's call were Mrs. Wells' daughter, Mrs. Isabel Sears, Mrs. Sears' daughter, Mrs. Eugene Sears, and her little son, making four generations in the room at the time. The president shook hands with them all.

The visit of the president greatly cheered Mrs. Wells. She was anxious to shake his hand, as she has met twelve of the United States' chief executives. In her younger years, Mrs. Wells took an active interest in politics, and on several occasions was sent east to the electoral conventions. She also has called on several presidents at the White House in Washington, but this is the first time a president has called on her. Mrs. Wells is now more than 91 years of age. She has played a prominent part in the life of the state and is perhaps the most noted woman character Utah has ever known. It is believed Mrs. Wells will recover from her present illness and if her condition permits will speak at the coming Relief society conference.

The land was not thought to be of a mineral nature and, as the homesteads which were started under the placer law were in the vicinity of a large reservoir, forest officials ordered an investigation.

Ranger Cahill was a miner before entering the employ of the forest service and being an expert in this particular work, was sent to the lands for the purpose of determining whether the land was valuable as mining property.

WILLIAMS SEEMS TO BE BIG PUZZLE OF COMING CLASH BETWEEN REDS AND SOX

Baseball critics seem to be unable to dope out the probable value of Claude Williams, Eddie Cicotte's running mate, in the coming world series. Some of the wise heads of baseball say Williams will prove the star of the classic with his left handed shoos. Others opine that he will prove easy for the Reds—as he proved for the Indians during the season. The Indians hammered him without any trouble.

Williams has been a big winner for the Sox, as everyone knows. He and Cicotte were practically the whole hurling staff for Gleason. At last reports Williams was on the verge of hanging up his twenty-fifth win. Cicotte leads him by four or five victories. On the face of these figures Williams appears almost as valuable a man as Cicotte. But he lacks the steadiness, the control and some of the experience of Eddie.
